ACQUARIO A320 BY AIRJET DESIGNS

With studios in France and Miami, one boutique design firm is focused on delivering beauty, luxury and sophistication to airborne surroundings.

AirJet Designs is a boutique firm with a special niche in the design of private jet interiors. Soaring to new heights with unrivaled luxury and comfort, AirJet's extravagant stylings of the Acquario A320 offers the ultimate in-flight experience. Designed with a nautical and tropical interior scheme, the aircraft's custom furnishings, spacious cabins and unique features lend modern conveniences in the air that one might find in an opulent penthouse condominium.

Inspiration for the cabin's interior is taken from organic forms and shapes found in underwater sealife, such as seashells, coral and fish. A coral motif made out of polished metallic inlays is found throughout the cabin on the valance panels. In addition, the seat styling evokes the idea of sitting in a mother-of-pearl round shell. Taking center stage, the cabin's aquarium edges both the dining and lounge areas, and features several species of freshwater tropical fish.

ABOVE: The furniture design is modern with clean, minimal lines and is complemented by a color and material selection dominated by white Italian full-grain leather, zebrawood, white Carrera marble and satin nickel trim. In the dining area, eight seats nestle around a large marble table, while hand-tufted, wool and silk carpet mimics waves and water ripples.

ABOVE: An elegant light fixture with a seashell shape and wave-like motif casts a luminous glow over the lounge area styled with a large corner divan and two shell seats covered in a full-grain Italian leather.

BELOW: Cabinetry is clad in zebrawood while a see-through partition separates the bedroom and bath. For the owner's entertainment, a transparent OLED TV screen is integrated into the shower stall partition.
